Hello,

For your awareness and for you to note to your employees, it is legal to film on public property.

If anyone is filming in public areas and on public ground, they are constitutionally allowed to do so. Do not interfere.

General guidelines:

- Emphasize to staff that they can be filmed while on the public floor. They are not to argue or debate the point ever.

- If asked a library question, please respond or direct them to a supervisor. Otherwise you do not need to engage.
- Guards – if any issue arises between a patron and another who is filming, follow your de-escalation training and remember filming is permitted in public areas.
- Discretely alert management when you can. It is for awareness only.
- All LFPL staff fall under these same guidelines.

Thank you for your assistance.
